Three bicycle riders have been killed. Forty-eight pedestrians have been killed. One fatality involving an animal drawn vehicle has been reported. School Board Unveils Preliminary Plans For Vocational School

BY WES FEESE
EDITOR

The Adair County School Board met with Superintendent Alan Reed last Thursday and revealed preliminary plans to build a vocational school on campus that will teach welding/metal fabrication and health sciences. The potential move intends to serve as the next step in the Race to the Top initiative – producing work-ready and career-ready graduates.

"Since I moved here in 1977 it's been, 'Why can't we have a vocational school?'" Reed said. "Here it is. We're going to be getting our students career ready."

The proposition will cost approx. $1.1 million, but Reed said that federal grant money is available and that they're confident that the Board will only be responsible for $350,000, or about one-third of the total estimated cost of construction.

The two areas of study that the vocational center will offer – welding and health science – were selected because of the favorable employment market in those fields locally. Most certified

Adair Night Out Brings Parents Into The Classroom

BY WES FEESE
EDITOR

Almost 300 parents and students were at Adair County High School Tuesday evening to talk to teachers and review students' work. Adair Night Out – the brainchild of student teacher Kasey Litzinger – surpassed most attendance expectations, and principal Troy Young said that similar programs are in the school's near future.

"We want the community to be involved with what's going on up here," Young remarked. "This event is centered around science and math, but hopefully sometime after Christmas we'll do one for social studies and English, and then another one for the humanities classes."

The informal program allowed for students and parents to

Chamber Hears From ACHS Scholars

The November meeting of the Adair County Chamber of Commerce was held at Anderson's Pizzeria on Tuesday. While the typical majority of the meeting comes as a speech from various local business owners, this month's edition was guided by six much younger faces as four Governor's Scholars and two Rogers Scholars from Adair County High School shared their experiences with the Chamber.

"Anytime I have an opportunity like this to promote our students and young people, that's a good thing," said ACHS Principal Troy Young before presenting the first of four Governor's Scholars, Natalie Bertram.

Bertram's speech focused on the social aspect of GSP, highlighting the experience of being on a college campus with several hundred other teenagers—nearly all of them total strangers.

"I'm a social butterfly, so that was great for me," Bertram said. "You're placed in a dorm with someone who may be a complete opposite of you, but over five weeks you learn to be close friends."

In fact, it was those differences that Bertram says served as the highlight of her experience.

"Being from Columbia, I'm used to most people being pretty similar," she explained. "But GSP is a melting pot. There are people from different backgrounds, and you learn about all of them. I really learned to open up and respect their views. It was way more

Adair Band Runner-up At Bands Of America

BY BLAKE SPIRES
ASST. EDITOR

After another season laden with championships, the Adair Band tested their mettle against the top bands from across the country, traveling to Indianapolis last week, Nov. 13-16, to compete in the Bands of America National Championships. The Band turned in their best performance of the season in the semifinals on Saturday morning, but came up just .15 points short of a Class A National Title.

"This was the most competitive BOA Grand National Event I've ever attended," said Adair Band Director Tom Case of the loaded field that included four former Class A champions.

Adair first took the field on Thursday, posting a solid preliminary performance that was good enough to qualify for the prestigious semifinals on Saturday. Adair nailed their semifinals performance

The Weekly WORD

Editorial Commentary
Written By
Wes Feese, EDITOR

Britain's Oxford University Press announced earlier this week that 2013's "Word of the Year" is, drumroll please: selfie.

Yes, the hugely popular, wholly unimportant, internet-driven and self-aggrandizing method of taking and sharing self portraits on a smartphone was determined to be the most culturally impactful word this year.

I think this pick perfectly sums up where we are as a country, and as a culture, in 2013. Words of the Year are almost always technology driven – otherwise the word would probably already be in the collective lexicon. Past Words of the Year picks (though not necessarily the Oxford Press' selection) include cyber, web, tweet, app, and hashtag, so it's no surprise that developing technology – the heightened prevalence of smartphones – dictated this year's selection.

What's interesting though is how personal this year's pick was. Cyber is an abstract term, app is a digital tool, but selfie is just a picture of yourself, taken by yourself. It's almost depressing that so many people don't have anyone to take a picture with, or even snap the picture. It would be depressing, if not for the even more depressing fact that these people don't want anyone else in their precious picture. It's a self-centered, technology-driven phenomenon that offers a literal screenshot into young people's self-centered, technology-driven lifestyles.

The selfie pick illustrates something else though: A generational gap in language that has always existed to an extent (high schoolers have always talked differently than 50-year-olds) but has been accentuated by rapidly changing technology. The "selfie generation" (I should copyright that) is one that I probably belong to, but is dominated by younger individuals – middle schoolers, high schoolers, and college-age adults. It's notable that the most significant new word in 2013 is a word that adults rarely use. Many adults might have never even heard the term "selfie" before reading this column.

The "selfie" phenomenon is a double-edged sword of connectivity and disconnect. On one end, it brings people together. Someone can share a self portrait with people across the globe. It could potentially be viewed by millions of people in a matter of minutes. Depending on the social media site on which a selfie is posted, people can comment on the picture, offering compliments, questions, or simply using the picture as an icebreaker to start a conversation. Friends and strangers alike all have access.

On the other edge of that sword though, friends and strangers are alike. A stranger might comment on a selfie, or a friend might, but a friend will likely have just as little context of the picture as a stranger. Twenty years ago, you would have a much harder time sharing a picture with the world, but you'd be way more likely to have some friends in that picture as well. Now, all of those friends are at home, or in their car, taking pictures of themselves and looking at pictures of people they may or may not know. They are involved in a very impersonal way, forming and maintaining relationships that are nourished digitally, one photograph at a time. You are closer to the entire world than any generation has ever been, but also farther way from your neighbors and real friends than any generation has ever been as well.

With all this said, here are three of my predictions for future Words of the Year, based on my observations from this year's selection:

•Voice chat. This word already exists, and it's my most realistic pick. Voice chat differs from the "natural" way of chatting –typing messages that are sent over a computer of phone that another human reads and responds to at his or her convenience, by allowing people to chat with their voices. Voice chats are transmitted over phones and computers, and will become more common as technology progresses. Many years ago, friends used a primitive form of voice chat that didn't require a computer or phone, but this method of communication fell out of favor due to the correspondents having to be in close proximity to each other to work. Can you imagine? Face-to-face interactions – what a novel idea.

•Interactors. We all know about computers, smartphones, tablets, cameras and televisions. Interactors will make all of these devices obsolete, because it will combine all five mediums into one sleek machine with a big screen and capabilities of serving as any of the aforementioned devices. Cell phone cameras started this trend 10 years ago, and smartphones have edged us even closer to having an all media device. We're only a few years away from hanging a big interactor on the wall to serve as a television, and packing around smaller interactors to serve as cell phones and cameras. Medium-sized versions will be used like tablets, but all the machines will have the same capabilities.

•Politruth. Politruth is a false statement that has been bent into a truth by politicians to serve their agenda. Barrack Obama was politruthful in saying Americans would be able to keep their previous health insurance if they wanted. Of course, when they couldn't, it still wasn't a lie because it wasn't his fault insurance carriers had to stop offering the same deals. When the government recently decided to funnel money into insurance companies so they would continue tooffer their previous rates, the POTUS' original comments were then proven to be politruthful all along.

Toronto mayor Rob Ford was politruthful when he denied smoking crack. Of course he wasn't telling the truth, but his drug binge occurred in a drunken stupor, according to Ford himself, and he can't be held accountable for getting so drunk he blacks out, so his comment was a politruth.

There it is. The word of 2013 is selfie. This is the world we live in, and whatever the word of the year for 2014 will be, you can rest assured that it will be three things: created by young people, made possible by technology, and useless to a large percentage of the population.

Letter To The Editor

Protect Your Pets This Winter

Editor,

Winter, with its bitter wind, rain and snow, is rapidly approaching. Now is the time to check our doghouses, patching and repairing all cracks and leaks. It is also time for new, clean bedding, and straw is best. This bedding will need to be replaced often. Putting a board along the bottom of the door opening will help keep the bedding inside the house. Also, turning the door away from the wind helps protect your dog from the cold.

For those who still have not built or purchased that doghouse, there are some important things to remember. The house should be only large enough for the dog to walk in, turn around, and lay down. If the house is that size, the dog's body heat can warm the interior somewhat. When a doghouse is larger than needed, your companion will suffer greatly from the cold weather this winter. More ideas to help your dog: the doorneeds to be off-set to one side, giving the dog a wall to lie behind; an overlapping roof and small porch can also give your dog additional protection.

Cats also need a house, something they can get into, not just a box, with a blanket in the garage or barn.

High-quality food is very important and adding a tablespoon of corn oil can provide extra calories for warmth. Meat fat, drippings and bones are bad for dogs and cats and should be put in the garbage, not in your animals.

The need for a constant supply of fresh water cannot be exaggerated. To insure that my dogs and cats have water at all times, I use heated bowls when possible. When that is not possible, I switch buckets frequently. When a bucket begins to freeze, I put it in the tub to thaw and put a fresh bucket outside. Insufficient water can lead to dehydration, hypothermia, and death.

Even though the weather is harsh, take time each day to talk and play with your cats and dogs. They love you; you are their whole world.

Once again I plead with you, please have your dogs and cats spayed and neutered. When you do you are eliminating the possibility of a number of different kinds of cancer and you are also taking a giant step towards ending animal suffering caused by overpopulation.

Thank you,
Lucia Beeler
Cecilia, Ky.

Ricky M. Hadley

Ricky M. Hadley, 57, of Columbia, KY, died Saturday, November 16, 2013 at 9:15 A.M. at his home.

He was born April 3, 1956, in Adair County. He was the son of the late Benjamin F. Hadley and Mary E. Hadley, who survives.

He attended the Little Cake Christian Church and was a former factory worker.

He is survived by: his mother, Mary E. Hadley of Columbia, KY; three brothers , Dwan, Dwight and Terry Hadley all of Columbia, KY; two sisters, Amber Susan Hadley Brockman of Paducah, KY and Patricia Hadley Zhatkoff of Florence, KY. Several other relatives and friends also survive.

Ricky Hadley was a beloved son, brother, uncle and friend. He loved God and his family. His favorite place to be was in the woods. He loved nature of all kinds. Canoeing down the rivers and streams to hunting and camping, he just loved being out in nature. Christmas was one of his favorite holidays and he always bought only American made gifts for each of his family members. Sometimes wrapped in tin foil or brown paper, he wrapped each one himself and often added a humorous tag. He never liked a lot of attention put on him, so he chose not to have a funeral. At the end of his life he showed true courage and dignity, always showing his appreciation to his caretakers. He was a brave soul and will truly be missed by all.

welders in the area are 50 years or older.

Daryl McGaha and Judy Keltner were on hand for the meeting representing the Lake Cumberland Area Development District, and McGaha noted the practicality of a vocational school.

"You can train people, but you need to train them for where the jobs are," McGaha said. "There's a great lapse in the opportunities young people have to gain a skill. These are nationally certified credentials that can carry over to other training facilities and the business community."

The grant money that is expected to pay for the majority of the construction of the school will come from two grants – a Kentucky Community Development Block Grant in which the County of Adair and City of Columbia will be joint applicants, and an Appalachian Regional Commission grant for which the county will apply. It was revealed that the Board does have the borrowing potential to move forward with the plan without the grant money, but that possibility was not discussed in deteail. Keltner said that she's cautiously confident that the money will be obtained.

"There's never a guarantee, but they still have some funds available" Keltner said.

Board member Mike Harris asked about a timeline for knowing if the money will be available.

Keltner explained that a public hearing would be held at the Courthouse Annex prior to the Adair County Fiscal Court meeting on Dec. 10 to discuss the proposition.

Harris then asked Ron Heath if vocationally trained students might attract industry to the area, and Heath responded affirmatively.

"I hope the grants go through," Harris said. "It's a great opportunity for our county, our kids, and our students."

Adair County High School principal Troy Young attended the meeting, along with his vice principal, Travis Gay, and both explained the need for vocational programs at the high school, which was assessed through a student survey.

"The big thing with us, it's not that [students] don't want these programs. They don't want the travel time," Young explained, referencing the bus ride to Russell County that current ACHS vocational students take on a regular basis. "It makes it much easier having access here. It's a great opportunity."

Gay revealed that of last year's graduates, less than half qualified as career-ready, and implied that a vocational school can help change that trend. McGaha also said that after the school is up and running, it could potentially serve to educate and train adults at night.

All Board members were present for the meeting.

ARC Grant Applications For Strategic Planning Efforts In Adair County Are Being Accepted

In these tough economic times, many communities in Southern and Eastern Kentucky often have a vision for the future but lack the funds necessary to make that vision a reality.

During the next Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC) funding cycle, The Center for Rural Development will be awarding federally funded mini-grants to help advance strategic planning efforts throughout the region.

Grant applications from city and county governments and eligible nonprofit organizations in 37 Southern and Eastern Kentucky--including Adair County--will be accepted through Dec. 12. Grants range from $5,000 to a maximum of $10,000.

The ARC mini-grants, awarded through The Center's Developing and Implementing Community Strategies Program, may be used for either the successful creation of a strategic plan or the implementation of priority community development projects identified in existing strategic plans. The use of technology solutions in the implementation and execution of these plans and projects is encouraged.

Eligibility guidelines, funding availability, and grant application materials may be downloaded from The Center's website at www.centertech.com. For more information on how to apply for ARC funding support through The Center, contact Patti Simpson at 606-677-6000 or email arc@centertech.com.

Since 2005, more than $661,000 in ARC mini-grant funding has been awarded by The Center to 49 Southern and Eastern Kentucky communities to advance local economic and community development plans.

All projects must be completed within six months after the grant announcement and require a local cash match of 20 percent of the total project cost. Grants are expected to be awarded in January.

The Center, a nonprofit organization located in Somerset, Ky., was established in 1996 through the vision of U.S. Congressman Harold "Hal" Rogers (KY-05) and other leaders. The Center's mission is to provide leadership that stimulates innovative and sustainable economic development solutions and a better way of life in Southern and Eastern Kentucky.

2014 4-H Country Ham Project

Do you like to eat country ham? Would you would like to learn how country ham is processed and process your own country ham? If the answer is YES to these questions, then the 4-H Country Ham project is for you.

WHAT

4-H members throughout the state spend several months preparing their hams for the Fair, where their meat is judged by commercial country ham producers according to its smell, roundness, color, and texture.

WHEN

To sign up for the project, youth and parents must complete the Country Ham Project Agreement and pay the $55.00 fee. Starting sometime in January, youth will meet to start curing their hams. This year will be cure them in the Adair County 4-H Ham House. Youth will also have to attend regular meetings to complete the required six hours of trainings to learn about hams and the curing process. In August, the ham will be taken to the Kentucky State Fair to be judged and youth will give a speech.

AFTER THE HAMS ARE CURED

Youth are required to give a presentation on any aspect of the project such as nutrition or value added. In addition, the processors evaluate ham on such factors as leanness, shape, appearance, and aroma. The combined presentation and judging scores determine the overall winner. This takes place during the Kentucky State Fair.

BENEFITS

Youth develop valuable technical merit, communications, research and organizational skills from the presentations. Persistence and responsibility are among the traits 4-H members develop during the nine months they cure hams at the processing plant. Youth also learn to appreciate the importance of value added to a raw commodity. And, there's a financial benefit. All participants also receive a State Fair premium.

COST

Participants pay a $55.00 fee This year each youth will be able to keep both hams or keep one of the hams and the second ham will be auctioned off at an event. The livestock club will get 10% of the sale to use with the club and 10% will go to the Ham Scholarship. Auction money will be divided equally between the members who participate in the ham project.

Failure to complete the project will results in forfeiture of the 2 hams and the $55.00 fee.

The deadline to sign up for the Country Ham project is December 2, 2013.

Adair County is limited to 20 participants, so this will be a first come - first served sign up. Applications can be picked up at the Adair County Cooperative Extension Service located at 409 Fairground Street.

4-H Shooting Sports Meeting

There will be a 4-H Shooting Sports Orientation meeting for any youth who is interested in participating in the program this next year. The meeting will be on Thursday, December 12 at 6 pm and will be held at the Adair County Elementary School cafeteria. This meeting for any youth who has never participated in the shooting sports program before but would like to start. The 4-H Shooting Sports program is open to youth ages 9-18 and offers the following discipline: Trap, Black Powder, Rifle, Archery, BB, Air Rifle and Pistol, 22 Pistol, and Hunter's Challenge.

Educational programs of the Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service serve all people regardless of race, color, age, sex, religion, disability, or national origin.

What Does the Future Hold for the 2014 Corn Crop?

Harvest of the 2013 corn crop is still underway but in the back of many farmers mind is planning for next year's crop. Selecting a variety, marketing, and pre-paying portions of fertilizer needs are all management decisions often made prior to December 31st. Around 15,000 acres of corn were likely planted in Adair County in 2013 compared to just 7,800 acres in 2003. Corn prices have fallen dramatically this year with elevator bids last November at $ 7.59 to $3.97 at closing last week. With high productions costs and land rents, it is very possible for a farmer with 200 bushel yields to be in the red this year.

Given market prices remain the same, there's no doubt that changes in management will be made next year. The biggest question may be how many acres of corn will be planted in 2014? Several farmers jumped in to the grain market as prices and profit margins improved. Are they ready to jump out? Will some fields be planted back into grass? Or will they switch to soybeans which are priced at a fair profit at this time? If so, will soybean markets get flooded?

Regardless of one's decision, marketing either crop (corn or soybeans) will likely be a major factor is determining next year's profit level. Some may argue that corn is at its lowest point; however many couldn't imagine corn would fall below $5 per bushel again either. Soybean elevator prices are currently above $12 with future markets declining after the first of the year. The point of the rambling is that we really do not know what will happen to grain markets in 2014.

At time of writing this article, future contracts for November 2014 soybeans are trading at $11.58 with December corn trading at $4.56. Can your farm profit at those market prices? If so, it may be a wise marketing strategy to market a portion of the 2014 crop. Economists generally consider that it is wise to market no more than 1/4th or 1/3rd at one time. Locking in a profit on a portion of the crop will at least get cash expenses covered and help us weather the storm if markets fall again.

If you are looking at purchasing corn seed for next year's crop, be sure to check out the UK corn hybrid variety trials. The trial consisted of hybrids in the early, medium and late maturities as well as a white corn test. Yields from five locations across Kentucky are reported this year. Yields among yellow hybrids ranged from 160 to 221bushels per acre. The results can be found online ator picked up at the Adair County Extension Office located on 409 Fairgrounds Street in Columbia. For more information, contact the Extension Office at 384-2317.

The second of the speakers, Leane Blackwelder, echoed those sentiments, but from a much different perspective.

"The first few days are just about meeting new people," she said. "At the time, I didn't like meeting new people. To be honest, part of me didn't really want to be there at first."

That outlook soon changed, thanks to a recreation time soccer match in which she learned that her fellow scholars often felt the same way she did, and that they actually had lots in common.

"We all have a different story," Blackwelder explained. "I learned to share my story, and was there to learn the story of everyone else. Even though our stories are different, we share the same passion, and I felt like I really connected with people."

Madelyn Murrell, the third speaker at the luncheon, focused on the unfamiliar experiences presented at GSP. Murrell explained how the Scholars each took a general studies class about an unknown topic. Murrell's was sewing, which she had never done before.

"That was definitely interesting," she said. "I've actually taken the skill with me though. I'm always sewing buttons back on shirts at home."

"It was fun to experience a lot of new things that I had never done before," she concluded.

Emily Peck, the final GSP speaker, focused on the service aspect of the program.

"Our service was geared toward helping other Scholars," she began. "The biggest thing we did was something called The Amazing Race."

The Race, which Peck explained consisted of numerous events spread all throughout the campus, required extreme coordinating and teamwork among the Scholars.

"It was the most extensively planned thing I've ever done," she said.

"We also learned how to handle adversity. The day of the Race, there was a funeral that shut down part of campus, and because of the heavy rain, our events weren't allowed to be on the grass. We had to basically re-plan the entire thing an hour before."

In the end, however, Peck reiterated her fellow Scholar's statements: it was all worth the effort.

"The biggest thing I learned was how rewarding it is to serve," she said. "Watching people enjoy the things we planned and created was a great feeling."

A fifth Governor's Scholar, Kyle Castaneda, was on a college visit and unable to attend the meeting.

With the now-senior GSP alums finished, the floor turned to current juniors Riley Grant and Rikki Michelle Neat, who completed the Rogers Scholar program this summer, which focuses on providing talented young students with the ability to excel in their region and state.

"You always hear people say you need to move on and go to a big city," Grant began. "The Rogers Scholar program is trying to give us the skills to be successful without having to leave the area."

Grant says the program, held at Lindsey Wilson College for one week, was not only successful in that, but was enjoyable as well.

"At first, I wasn't so sure I even wanted to go," he admitted, explaining that he is shy and was uneasy about being surrounded by 30 other people he had never met.

ACHS Senior and Morehead State GSP alum Madelyn Murrell was one of six Adair County students that shared their Governor's or Rogers Scholar experience with the Adair County Chamber of Commerce at Tuesday's monthly meeting held at Anderson's Pizzeria.

"My parents pushed me to apply, and my sister joked with me all summer about going away to nerd camp, but it was probably the best week of my summer."

"I didn't want to leave," he added, mentioning an etiquette dinner at LWC President Bill Luckey's house as the highlight of his week, drawing more laughs from the crowd.

Fellow Rogers Scholar Rikki Michelle Neat said that she held similar reservations going in to the experience.

"I was nervous at first. I didn't know if I wanted to spend a whole week of my summer just sitting in a classroom learning—that's what I thought it would be."

"It was nothing like that," she explained, listing experiences from a tour of LWC's nursing facilities to actually performing an X-ray and dissecting a pig.

"I love hands-on things like that, and Rogers Scholar was great at providing that experience," she said.

"The dinner was fun too," she added. "Ms. Sue Stivers taught us about etiquette—I didn't realize how many forks there were—and that was a great time too."

All in all, Neat raved about her experience, just as her fellow Governor's and Rogers Scholars had done.

"It was easily the best week of my summer and one of the best experiences I've ever had," she said. "I left a much different person than I came."

Adair County Has Been Awarded Federal Funds Under The Emergency Food And Shelter National Board Program

Honorable Ann Melton, Judge/Executive, announced recently that Adair County has been chosen to receive $7,810.00 to supplement emergency food and shelter programs in the county.

The selection was made by a National Board that is chaired by the Federal Emergency Management Agency and consists of representatives from The Salvation Army; America Red Cross; United Jewish Communities; Catholic Charities, USA; National Council of the Churches of Christ in the USA; and, United Way of America. The Local Board was charged to distribute funds appropriated by Congress to help expand the capacity of food and shelter programs in high-need areas around the country.

A Local Board chaired by Judge Melton will determine how the funds awarded to Adair County are to be distributed among the emergency food and shelter programs run by local service agencies in the area. The Local Board is responsible for recommending agencies to receive these funds and any additional funds available under this phase of the program.

Under the terms of the grant from the National Board, local agencies chosen to receive the funds must: 1. Be private voluntary non-profits or units of government, 2. Have an accounting system, 3. Practice non-discrimination, 4. Have demonstrated the capability to deliver emergency food and/or shelter programs, and 5. If they are a private voluntary organization, they must have a voluntary board. Qualifying agencies are urged to apply.

Adair County has distributed Emergency Food and Shelter funds previously with Lake Cumberland Community Action Agency, Inc. participating as the local recipient organization.

Public or private voluntary agencies interested in applying for Emergency Food and Shelter Program funds must contact the Adair County Judge/Executive's Office located at the Adair County Courthouse Annex by calling 270-384-4703 for a complete list of criteria. Please submit a one page narrative detailing your agency's abilities to meet the complete list of criteria by Monday, December 3, 1013.

walk around from room to room examining the work they've completed this year in their math and science classes. Some students gave PowerPoint presentations, others had posters decorated with facts about chemical elements, and others had stacks of work in folders.

"My group is presenting real life applications of exponential relations," explained math teacher Brent Campbell. "A night like this makes the parents and students aware of what's going on in the high school setting. They can see how important math and science are in careers and in the real world."

Young said that parent/teacher interactions were at the heart of Tuesday's program.

"It's a good chance for parents to get some feedback from teachers and be involved with their children's education," Young said. "It's about getting everyone on the same page – having a sense of pride in what's going on here."

Several administrators and teachers praised Litzinger for coming up with the idea for Adair Night Out. It will serve as her leadership project as part of her student teaching under science teacher Sheila Willis as a Lindsey Wilson College education student.

"At first we started talking about informing kids and parents about AP and dual credit classes, and it just kind of manifested and got bigger from there," Litzinger explained. "The goal is for parents to see how passionate their kids are about school."

Litzinger admitted that even she was pleasantly surprised with the turnout.

"I'm very pleased with how many people came," Litzinger said. "It's all about community involvement.

All parents and students were given a free meal in the cafeteria, and several teachers were thankful for the opportunity to talk to parents about their children's learning.

"We want to think all the administrators and teachers that worked so hard on this," Campbell said. "We especially want to thank the students and parents though. The students took ownership of this and have put in a lot of work."

in the early stages of Saturday morning, performing their "Walk This Way" show at its very best on the biggest of stages.

"We gave our best performance on the season," Case said of the rendition, which left many Adair supporters with tears in their eyes.

The stellar showing earned Adair the Class A Outstanding General Effect award, rewarding the massive, three-dimensional pink and orange steps, neon green and zebra-striped colorguard flags, and various complex marches and walks performed by Adair during the show.

Musically, the show featured numbers from Ravi Shankar, Liam Sternberg, Felix Mendelssohn, Edward Elgar, Philip Glass, Benoit Jutras, Harold Arlen, and Michael Nyman; and contained a segment in which members of the band played one another's trumpets.

"We were thrilled to be representing Class A and Kentucky in the semifinals," Case said. "That's a huge honor."

In all, the breathtaking run garnered a score of 76.80, topped only by Bellbrook Ohio's 76.95 in Class A, and falling less than 10 points behind scores that earned a top-12 overall national finish.

Despite the heart wrenching near-miss for what would have been the Adair Band's third national title, Case was ecstatic with his band.

"To come up just a tenth short of a national championship is tough," he said. "We are a little disappointed in the final result, but we're not sad about the product put on the field."

In fact, the entire season was remarkable, given the complexity of the show and the extreme youth of this edition of the Adair Band. That youth and inexperience, however, did not stop this year's band from adding to the already storied legacy of the program.

"This was a great season," Case said. "These students are awesome."

CHAPTER TEN

While we waited for Pa to hang up the phone and tell us about a surprise, Granny fixed us homemade bread with straight-from-the-shrub blackberry jam. The food was much tastier coming straight from the source.

"I'm going to miss homegrown vittles as much as I'm going to miss you and Pa," I told Granny after swallowing my first bite.

"You can still have homegrown goodies," Granny said as she shelled peas from the garden.

"How?" we asked.

"You can grow a garden," Granny explained. "You can also find a farmers' market or a vendor."

"A what?" I asked.

"A farmers' market is a place where farmers sell tomatoes, corn, peppers, cucumbers, strawberries, sorghum, honey and the like – so folks who don't live in the country can still have fresh produce to eat," she said. "There are more than 145 in Kentucky. We also have about 2,500 vendors. Sometimes vendors sell from the back of their trucks on the side of the road. The food's delicious, and the price is better than a grocery store. You could join a Community Supported Agriculture. CSA, as it's called, lets folks participate in farming and gardening. CSA subscribers pay at the beginning of the growing season for a share of the anticipated harvest; once harvesting begins, they receive weekly shares of vegetables and fruits. Many CSAs include herbs, flowers, honey, eggs, dairy products and meat. If there is a plentiful harvest, subscribers share in it. If the weather doesn't cooperate and the crops fail, members share in that, too. There are almost 50 on a Kentucky Department of Agriculture list."

"And, you must go to your county and state fairs. Pa and I love going every year and seeing the state's best livestock and produce. We like to splurge on a funnel cake."

Pa, who had returned from his phone call, said, "There's another way you can have homegrown vittles. We own a small piece of land adjacent to our farm. It's not big, but Granny and I haven't had the time to do anything with it. Since you enjoy farming, we want you to use the field any way you see fit. You could plant a garden on it, get some cows; grow hay or trees; plant orchards, soybeans or corn; or raise goats. It's a win-win situation. The field would be used and it would ensure that you doggies would come back and stay with us from time to time. And of course when you weren't here, we would do what farmers do – we'd help you."

"We love everything about farming – except for the manure. We love the animals, the food, the feather bed, the overalls and the two of you," I said, feeling a tear come to my eye. "We still have so much to learn. We didn't learn about farming catfish or soybeans or corn. And I haven't driven a tractor yet." That made Pa and Granny laugh.

"You may have lots to learn about farming, but you've come a long way since you arrived,"Pa said. "Besides, it would take much longer than a few days to learn. Sure, you saw dairy farming, beef farming, tobacco farming and learned about produce farming, but there is horse breeding, orchards, tree farms and, like you say, soybeans, corn and a host of other products. As far as that tractor, you have a lot more to learn before I turn you loose and give you the keys!" Pa stated. "But I'm glad you've had a taste of farm life. It's not for everyone, but it's the only life Granny and I know. It's tough being at the mercy of Mother Nature, planning around the milking, the feeding and the weather, but there's no greater reward than using our resources here in the Bluegrass to feed ourselves and others."

Chloe and I definitely agreed.

"We have to talk with our parents," my ever-careful sister stated.

"That's who I was talking with on the phone," Pa said. "I've cleared this with your folks, and they said that as long as you worked hard and it didn't interfere with your other commitments, it was fine with them. Your dad said he would call back in a bit so you could give him your decision and to let you know he was bringing the family here to pick you doggies up. Of course if you take the field, you will have to return soon to get started. But the field is yours if you so choose."

Chloe and I got up and gave Granny and Pa the biggest bear hug ever.

"Come on, Pa! Show us our land," we begged.

"Now?" Granny asked. "What if your parents call?"

"We promise to hurry!" I said, excited to talk to our parents. "But if Mom and Dad call before we return, tell them we're out standing in our field!"

ACHS Proclaims Nov. 20 College Application Day

The Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority is sponsoring Kentucky College Application Week, Nov. 18 through Nov. 22. The Adair County School system has jumped on board full steam ahead with Superintendent Alan Reed and Principal Troy Young signing documentation today proclaiming Wednesday, Nov. 20, 2013 College Application Day at Adair County High School.

Alan Reed, Superintendent of the Adair County School system, and Troy Young, Principal of Adair County High School, signed official documentation Monday morning proclaiming Wednesday, Nov. 20, 2013 as College Application Day at Adair County High School. On hand to witness the event were not only Adair County High School staff but excited senior students as well. Shown in the picture with Mr. Reed and Mr. Young are seniors Rachel Stephens and Jesse Sanchez.

The Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority idea behind the Kentucky College Application Week is simple -- you can't enroll if you don't apply. In today's world higher education no longer means only a four-year college degree. It can include two-year degrees, certificates, or diplomas from state community and technical colleges. Higher education and training give students more job options, job security, and help them earn higher wages.

Robin Loy, ACHS College and Career Readiness Counselor feels strongly that, "The application process should not be a barrier to pursing a college education, and ACHS is committed to eliminating any and all barriers students might face in advancing their skills beyond high school."

Principal Young was asked how he felt about the upcoming event and he stated, "We are excited that our students have an opportunity to come into the computer lab and work on their college applications. This will give us a chance to answer any questions that the students may have during the process and make this initial step a great success and as pleasant as possible."

Superintendent Alan Reed spoke with pride when he was asked what he thought about the upcoming College Application Day at ACHS. He stated:

Adair County High School and its students continue to embrace this community's vision of having all of our district's students college or career ready (CCR) by the time they graduate from ACHS. Students are being provided with more options after graduation. I am personally thrilled that our students recognize that life after high school is very competitive. I also want to thank our parents who also are helping us get the message across to our students that there is a huge dollar cost when their children are ill-prepared when they graduate. I also want to personally thank the administration and teachers at ACHS for their guidance, and even a gentle nudge to plan for life after high school. College Application Day is one important piece of the big picture.

Adair County Judge-Executive Ann Melton and Columbia Mayor Mark Harris signed a proclamation Tuesday morning declaring Nov. 18-22, 2013 American Education Week. Present at the signing were Pam Geisselhardt, Local President of Kentucky Education Association and Jason Rector, Local President of Kentucky Education Support Professionals Association.

November 18-22, 2013, is American Education Week, a celebration to honor individuals who are making a difference in ensuring that every child receives a quality education. Adair County joined the initiative Tuesday with a proclamation signed by Adair County Judge-Executive Ann Melton and Columbia Mayor Mark Harris. The entire complete proclamation follows:

American Education Week Proclamation November 18-22, 2013

WHEREAS, public schools are the backbone of our democracy, providing young people with the tools they need to maintain our nation's precious values of freedom, civility and equality; and

WHEREAS, community leaders are an integral part of the education process; and

WHEREAS, community leaders work to provide a safe and healthy learning environment for students of public schools; and

WHEREAS, community leaders work tirelessly to serve our children and communities with care and professionalism.

NOW, THEREFORE, we do hereby proclaim the week of November 18-22, 2013 as American Education Week.

1. Play The Garden Game. Like The Grocery Store Game in Chapter 1, go around the room and have each person name something they will grow in their garden. The first person will begin with the letter A. The second person will use the letter B, etc. For example, the first person might say, I'm planning a garden and I'm going to have an apple orchard. The second might say, I'm planning a garden and I'm going to have beets.

2. Pa and Granny told the pups that Kentucky has many Farmer's Markets and also Community Supported Agriculture groups. Using your local newspaper or the internet, research to find if there are any in your area.

3. Pa said farmers are at the mercy of Mother Nature. Email Woody at woody@thewoodybooks.com and explain what Pa meant.

4. Granny said it was important the pups visit their local and state fair. When is your county fair? When is the Kentucky State fair? Visit http://www.kystatefair.org/home/default.aspx and answer the following questions:

- •What year did the Kentucky State Fair begin?
- •Where is the state fair located?
- •What month does the fair occur?
- •How many days does the fair last?
- •List 5 different activities a person can do at the fair.

Did you go to a fair? Email Woody and tell him all about it.

5. Pa listed a long list of different types of farming in Kentucky. Can you think of any Pa missed?

6. If you were going to be a farmer, what kind of farm would you have? Why?

7. While you're emailing Woody, be sure and tell him what your liked most about "Outstanding in His Field."

8. The last one…Chapter 10. Paste it in your scrapbook as well as listen to the podcast. Stay tuned for Out Standing in His Field to appear in book form in 2014.

ACMS Hosts Glasgow For Tripleheader

The Adair County Middle School Boys Basketball program hosted the Glasgow Scotties on Monday night for three highly competitive games of hoops action. After dropping a heartbreaker in game one and succumbing to Glasgow's superior size in game two, the ACMS Eighth Grade squad avenged their underclassmen with a victory.

In the opener, officially deemed a seventh grade "B" game, but actually pitting sixth graders against one another for added experience, the ACMS boys trailed 15-7 with just two minutes to play in the first half, before rallying in the closing minutes to cut the margin to three, 18-15 at the half.

Sixth grade guard DJ Brown brings the ball up court against Glasgow pressure as part of Monday night's tripleheader at ACMS.

In the second half, ACMS took its first lead of the contest on a Kai Burton layup with 3:03 left in the third quarter. Glasgow would surge back ahead by four, but two free throws by D.J. Brown at the end of the third brought ACMS back within two, 27-25.

With just under four minutes to play in the contest, a Noah Vanarsdale three cut the Glasgow lead to three.With the Scotties swarming center Aaron Peck, ACMS had several looks at three, but were unable to find the bucket. A Burton rebound and score cut the lead to 33-31 with just 3.7 seconds to play. Burton stole the inbound pass under the rim, was unable to convert through contact on the shot attempt, and Peck's tip-in effort rolled out as time expired to leave the final margin at 33-31.

The seventh grade squad jumped out to an 8-1 lead early in the contest, using their speed and aggressiveness against a much larger Glasgow team. A James Owens rebound and score and two Adam Doss free throws capped the ACMS run before a Glasgow rally made it 13-12 ACMS after one.

A Baylor Giles put back opened the second quarter for ACMS before the Scotties asserted their inside dominance. A deep three, along with an inbound lob pass for a layup and foul with just eight-tenths of a second to play in the half pushed the visitors ahead 27-19 at the half.

The combination of offensive rebounding and deep shooting helped Glasgow extend their lead to 21 at one point late in the contest, but a Blaine Frazier drive and behind-the-back pass to Owens, along with several threes from Layndon Carter, pulled the final margin closer, leaving it 54-39 Glasgow.

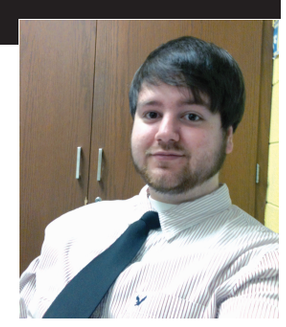
The ever-physical eighth grade game was a much lower scoring affair. A Hunter Cundiff drive and score opened the contest, and both squads would remain knotted at two points for the next several minutes. Three Glasgow free throws and a Blake Biggs free throw made it 5-3 Scotties after one.

To open the second, forward Kyle Estes scored six straight points for ACMS. Glasgow would answer, but driving layups by Mason Carter and Tate Walkup left the home team ahead 13-9 at the hA Glasgow three began the second half, cutting the ACMS lead to one. Four straight points by Cundiff, two of which came on a beautiful bounce pass across the lane from Estes, put Adair ahead 17-14. ACMS would lock in on defense, allowing just four more points the rest of the way. Their offense would find a groove down the stretch, and the eighth graders finished the job 28-18.

Seventh grader James Owens powers through one of several double teams deployed by Glasgow defenders in the paint on Monday night.

Eighth grade forward Tate Walkup skies over a Glasgow defender for two points as ACMS defeated the Scotties 28-18.

THE BREAKDOWN with Blake Spires



Sports are more popular and prevalent than ever before, not just in America, but worldwide. Whether it be the traditional television and radio coverage, or the countless websites, twitter accounts and even podcasts devoted to everything from badminton to racquetball, those who love sports are presented with more avenues than could have been imagined even 20 years ago—and that's absolutely awful.

It wouldn't be so bad if this flood of sports coverage was actually useful, informative or, you know, related to sports. But it isn't. In the same way that 24 hour news shifted the reporting of relevant information to political bickering and fear mongering for ratings and to fill time, the explosion of sports coverage continues to remove the sport aspect as much as it can.

As the undisputed champion of the current sports media scene, ESPN is driving the sporting bus directly off the proverbial cliff. While the media giant is arguably the greatest thing to ever happen for the American (and now international) sports fan, their initial coverage of games, highlights, recaps and news has found itself spinning toward a celebrity gossip channel in recent years.

In fact, their entire "embrace debate" mantra that now overruns nearly every show is destroying the up-and-coming generation of sports fans. I rarely missed this cutoff, in part due to my love for sports at such a young age, but I have friends who are my age that are unable to have an actual sports discussion, while at the same time describing themselves as huge fans. That's because ESPN's definition of sports debate includes nonsense about what someone tweeted or which hat they wore in a press conference instead of banter about the actual games.

Just out of curiosity, I glanced at the four-letter network's website, and checked their headlines section in the top, right-hand corner. Six of the 10 headlines were about something other than on-the-field topics. A teammate argument, a potential court hearing, and a disgruntled coach who doesn't like the BCS system highlight the main sporting stories of the day. To be honest, that's an improvement over how it typically looks, and the continued discussion of this garbage is removing the requirement for actual understanding of strategy and execution from the conversation.

One of my initial columns when I took this job was about the hilariously awful focus on Notre Dame linebacker Manti Te'o and his imaginary girlfriend. The topic absolutely saturated the Internet and airwaves, and while it was amusing and bizarre, it was dominated by people who couldn't tell you if Te'o was a Mike, Sam or Will linebacker, or that even knew what those things are. Folks who wouldn't know a box-and-one from a 2-3 zone had strong, vocal opinions about LeBron James—not the player, but the meanie-head jerk who left Cleveland for Miami.

It has to stop. I know that personal dramatics and the reality television culture puts eyeballs on the screen and ultimately makes money, but someone with at least a little bit of integrity and love of the games themselves has to stand up and tone it down a notch. I refuse to have any more casual conversations about how Team A can't make the playoffs because Player X is dating Celebrity Y or how Team B is destined for failure because their two best players prefer different rappers.

As I said, I know why it happens. With three or four channels that are always on the air, there is a ton of time to fill, and scandal magazine idiocy like that is appealing to the masses. Die-hard fans aren't the source of revenue, and the casual fan doesn't know or care about the intricacies of the games they watch. Buffoons like Skip Bayless (who most likely actually knows a great deal about sports) make gigantic money riling up the masses by screaming controversial things that they probably don't even believe, and so ESPN continues to trot out former players and once-legitimate writers to perform their circus song and dance routine instead of imparting any substantial insight or analysis.

I hate sounding like a bitter old curmudgeon, or having to write a column that makes me sound like some type of sports hipster—especially because I've fallen victim to it as well. Whether I like it or not, I've written columns about Johnny Manziel's off-field antics, bullying in the NFL, and how terrible a human being Alex Rodriguez happens to be. That's the dialogue in the sports community, and if I want anyone to care or understand my column, those are the low-hanging fruit I'm forced to pick.

The worst part is that there's probably no feasible solution. The networks aren't going to stop parading out comedian Frank Caliendo every Sunday morning to do impressions of famous football figures instead of discussing schemes and strategies for the day's games. They aren't going to stop showing us what Shaq said about Kobe or asking questions they already know the answers to in order to get a canned response from a coach or player.

As long as the money keeps rolling in, this is what we're going to get, and given that this type of mindless drivel is what the general public seems to gravitate towards, the cash flow pipeline will continue to grow. I suppose we're just along for a ride on the money wave. Let's enjoy the few hours when the game is actually on, filter through the sideline stories about the quarterback's love life and halftime reports about what the assistant coach wore after the game, and seek refuge in the one pure aspect we have left…while it lasts.

As the fantasy playoffs draw nearer, I hope you're either separating yourself from the pack or making a charge for that final spot. In a game as random as fantasy football, simply making the playoffs with a team bolstered by hot waiver pick ups can be all it takes to come away with the crown.

With these crucial weeks coming up, it's important to make the right line-up call. I won't give away the secret since we know the players read my column, but here's who you should artsay for Week 12.

Anquan Boldin, WR, San Francisco 49ers: After scoring his first touchdown in two months against the Saints on Sunday, Boldin is showing signs of life at the right time of the season. It was only a year ago that he elevated his play to an otherworldly level down the stretch and carried the Ravens passing game to a Super Bowl.

With the awful Washington secondary on the docket this week, Boldin has another chance to shine. As a guy who was likely written off, he can be had for cheap and provide a nice spark as a WR3 in your lineup.

Delanie Walker, TE, Tennessee Titans: We go from a current 49er to a former one. With the incomparably intelligent but intolerably frustrating Harvard-grad Ryan Fitzpatrick at QB, Walker had a massive week 11, racking up double digit catches and topping 100 yards receiving. The same Fitzpatrick made Scott Chandler a viable fantasy option for short stretches in Buffalo, so ride Walker's hot hand while it lasts.

Vincent Jackson, WR, Tampa Bay Buccaneers: VJax isn't a guy you typically need to be told to start. He's coming off a monster week 11, and is a perennial must-start in fantasy circles. However, with the mess in Tampa Bay and a rookie QB, owners who made a fortunate waiver wire pick up might have had better options in recent weeks.

This week, Tampa faces the Lions and their high-octane aerial attack. With a poor defense, the Bucs are going to be behind, and that means lots and lots of pass attempts. With Glennon still learning the ropes at QB, Jackson stands to see even more targets than usual. If even half of them are catchable, he could be in line for a huge day.

Here's who you should itsay in Week 12.

DeMarco Murray, RB, Dallas Cowboys: Murray falls in the range of guys you drafted so high that you feel like you have to start them each week, but who typically don't perform well enough to justify it. Part of that is due to injury, and the other part is because the Cowboys continue to believe that Tony Romo throwing the ball 55 times per game is a recipe for success.

Don't expect things to get better this week. The Cowboys play the red-hot Giants (that felt weird to type), who have only allowed one runner to top 100 yards this season. In their recent winning streak, they've stifled Adrian Peterson and LeSean McCoy, who are both better runners with far more opportunities than Murray.

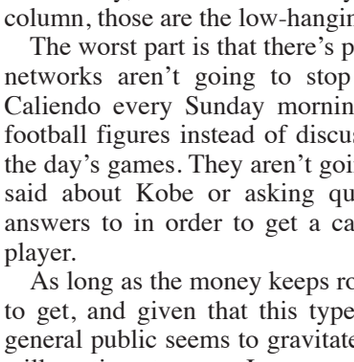
Stevan Ridley, RB, New England Patriots: Ridley has vastly underperformed this season as a part of the struggling Patriots offense. As a guy who was drafted in the first three rounds following his monster 2012 season, Ridley has frustrated owners all year long. In recent weeks, however, the Pats offense had appeared to find its groove (and its health), leading Ridley to be inserted into several lineups.

Monday night, Ridley put the ball on the ground again, losing his league-leading third fumble of the year. That's the one cardinal sin in The Hoodie's offense. With Shane Vereen returning from injury, the Pats have a talented option to replace Ridley, and a matchup with the Broncos this week means even more pass attempts than usual—a recipe that favors Vereen even more.

Ryan Mathews, RB, San Diego Chargers: For the first time in a couple of years, Mathews has looked like a must-start fantasy option in recent weeks. The once pass-heavy Chargers offense has found its balance, and Mathews has been finding the endzone as well as topping 100 yards. Owners who have been waiting for this breakout all season likely had him on their bench and missed the benefits, and are looking to right those wrongs and finally get some value out of Mathews.

Don't chase last week's points. San Diego heads to Kansas City this week, playing a Chiefs squad coming off their first loss of the season. With the home crowd behind them and a renewed focus, the already-dominant defense will key in on stuffing the run and making the Chargers one-dimensional.

Former Indians



KEVIN BRIDGEWATERS
Guard, Timba Timisoara

Bridgewaters' only game this week followed a typical theme that's emerged through eight games so far in the Romanian League. He put up solid numbers, as he has all season, but Timba Timisoara dropped to 1-7 with an 85-71 loss to Craiova.

Bridgwaters poured in 22 points in the loss on 9-17 shooting, leading his team in scoring once again, and also pulled in five rebounds to go with his six assists. He's his team's leading scorer and assist man, and currently ranks fifth in scoring in the Romanian League.

Timba Timisoara will be back in action Saturday for a matchup with Gaz Metan.

Season averages: 17.8 points, 3.5 rebounds, 3.8 assists, 1.6 steals, 53.2-percent field-goal shooting

LINDSEY WILSON COLLEGE ATHLETICS

Hurd's Golden Goal Gives Lindsey Wilson Women's Soccer MSC Tournament Title

Renee Hurd scored a golden goal 27 seconds into overtime to lift the Lindsey Wilson women's soccer team to a 2-1 win over Cumberland (Tenn.) in the Mid-South Conference Tournament championship match on Friday.

The second-seeded Blue Raiders (18-3) earn the Mid-South's automatic bid into the NAIA National Tournament. Top-seeded Cumberland (15-3-1) should earn an at-large bid into the national tournament.

Hurd scored from point-blank range off Ayaki Shinada's second assist of the night to give the Blue Raiders the tournament title.

Cumberland never possessed the ball in the extra period.

After briefly playing the ball back into its own half of the field to start the overtime period, Lindsey Wilson quickly went on the attack.

Shinada took the ball from a back line pass and laid it off to Natasha Gensetter who played it directly back to Shinada. Following a couple of dribbles, Shinada played a perfect pass onto Hurd's boot just outside the six-yard box.

Hurd chipped it over Cumberland goalkeeper Lindsay Kitson -- who was charging off her line towards Hurd -- and into the back of the net for the 2-1 win.

With the win, No. 4-ranked Lindsey Wilson avenges a 1-0 regular season loss at Cumberland in Lebanon, Tenn. on Oct. 16.

Lindsey Wilson needed a come-from-behind effort to force the extra frame.

Cumberland's Taylor Nay -- the MSC Women's Soccer Player of the Year -- put the No. 7-ranked Bulldogs in front in the 66th minute. Nay scored off a 30-yard free kick following a Lindsey Wilson foul.

Nay hit a laser to the right side of the goal past Lindsey Wilson goalkeeper Johanna Henrikson for the 1-0 lead.

It took the Blue Raiders nearly 20 minutes to notch the equalizer.

Shinada was once again the facilitator.

Lindsey Wilson finished outshooting the Bulldogs 12-4 for the match.

Kitson ended with four saves compared to one from Henrikson.

Members of the Lindsey Wilson College women's soccer team celebrate winning the Mid-South Conference tournament Friday night at Walter S. Reuling Stadium following a 2-1 overtime win over Cumberland (Tenn.) University. INDEPENDENT AUDITOR'S REPORT ON INTERNAL CONTROL OVER FINANCIAL REPORTING AND ON COMPLIANCE AND OTHER MATTERS BASED ON AN AUDIT OF FINANCIAL STATEMENTS PERFORMED IN ACCORDANCE WITH GOVERNMENT AUDITING STANDARDS

Honorable Mayor and Members of the City Council
City of Columbia, Kentucky

We have audited, in accordance with the auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America and the standards applicable to financial audits contained in Government Auditing Standards issued by the Comptroller General of the United States, the financial statements of the governmental activities, the business-type activities, each major fund, and the aggregate remaining fund information of City of Columbia, Kentucky, as of and for the year ended June 30, 2013, and the related notes to the financial statements, which collectively comprise City of Columbia, Kentucky's basic financial statements, and have issued our report thereon dated October 11, 2013.

Internal Control Over Financial Reporting

In planning and performing our audit of the financial statements, we considered City of Columbia, Kentucky's internal control over financial reporting (internal control) to determine the audit procedures that are appropriate in the circumstances for the purpose of expressing our opinions on the financial statements, but not for the purpose of expressing an opinion on the effectiveness of City of Columbia, Kentucky's internal control. Accordingly, we do not express an opinion on the effectiveness of City of Columbia, Kentucky's internal control.

A deficiency in internal control exists when the design or operation of a control does not allow management or employees, in the normal course of performing their assigned functions, to prevent, or detect and correct, misstatements on a timely basis. A material weakness is a deficiency, or a combination of deficiencies, in internal control, such that there is a reasonable possibility that a material misstatement of the entity's financial statements will not be prevented, or detected and corrected on a timely basis. A significant deficiency is a deficiency, or a combination of deficiencies, in internal control that is less severe than a material weakness, yet important enough to merit attention by those charged with governance.

Our consideration of internal control was for the limited purpose described in the first paragraph of this section and was not designed to identify all deficiencies in internal control that might be material weaknesses or, significant deficiencies. Given these limitations, during our audit we did not identify any deficiencies in internal control that we consider to be material weaknesses. However, material weaknesses may exist that have not been identified.

Compliance and Other Matters

As part of obtaining reasonable assurance about whether City of Columbia, Kentucky's financial statements are free from material misstatement, we performed tests of its compliance with certain provisions of laws, regulations, contracts, and grant agreements, noncompliance with which could have a direct and material effect on the determination of financial statement amounts. However, providing an opinion on compliance with those provisions was not an objective of our audit, and accordingly, we do not express such an opinion. The results of our tests disclosed no instances of noncompliance or other matters that are required to be reported under Government Auditing Standards.

Purpose of this Report

The purpose of this report is solely to describe the scope of our testing of internal control and compliance and the results of that testing, and not to provide an opinion on the effectiveness of the entity's internal control or on compliance. This report is an integral part of an audit performed in accordance with Government Auditing Standards in considering the entity's internal control and compliance. Accordingly, this communication is not suitable for any other purpose.

Leading the way to better Diabetes Care.

"It's absolutely wonderful!"

Donald Belden has always been a busy man. He worked as a process engineer for nearly 40 years, traveling extensively to Europe, Asia, Australia, and all over the United States. A few years ago, he retired, but his life really hasn't slowed down that much. It has just changed direction.

Although he still gets called upon as a consultant from time to time, most days, you will find Don playing music. He plays at nursing homes, churches, and family reunions with the Robertson Family & Friends Band. You name it, he plays it: mandolin, dulcimer, fiddle, Dobro.

In 1997, Don was diagnosed with type II diabetes and he began taking oral medication. In 2012, however, things changed drastically. His blood sugar spiked to dangerous levels, and a new plan of attack became necessary. Don started seeing an endocrinologist – a physician who specializes in the treatment of diabetes. The only problem was: the doctor was in Lexington.

"I had to leave 3½ hours before my appointment in order to make sure I got there on time," he said. Traveling that distance and maneuvering through all the traffic was not something Don looked forward to and sometimes the trips even made him miss music practice.

When endocrinologist, Dennis Joseph, M.D., joined the medical staff at Lake Cumberland Regional Hospital, Don was one of his first patients. Dr. Joseph's office is "45 minutes from my front door," Don said.

With his specialist nearby, doctor visits are no longer a time-consuming ordeal. That allows Don the time to be busy doing what he loves: reading, dancing, repairing computers, writing, cooking, and of course, playing music. He even shares his musical talents with Rehab and Special Care unit patients at Lake Cumberland Regional Hospital, when he delights them with old gospel favorites once a month.

These days, you won't hear any complaints when Don has to go to his diabetes specialist. He describes Dr. Joseph and Veronica Boley, APRN, Certified Diabetes Educator, as "glad-handers" – friends to everyone they meet.

Things are going well, now. Don is busy doing what he enjoys – and that is a good thing. His diabetes is under control – and that's a great thing.

But having his specialist so close . . . well, Don says that's "absolutely wonderful!"
